Living in Prague

Living in Prague as an international student offers a balance between affordability and quality of life. Here's a breakdown of the typical expenses you can expect:

- Accommodation:

Prague offers a range of accommodation options for students, including university dormitories, shared apartments, and private rentals. The cost of accommodation will vary depending on location and amenities. On average, monthly rent for a shared apartment can range from €300 to €600, while university dormitories may be more budget-friendly, starting from around €200 per month.

- Food:

Prague has a diverse culinary scene, catering to various budgets and tastes. Cooking meals at home can be a cost-effective option, with groceries costing around €150 to €200 per month. Alternatively, eating out at restaurants and cafes can range from affordable local eateries to more upscale international establishments. A typical meal at a mid-range restaurant may cost around €8 to €15.

- Transportation:

Prague has an efficient and affordable public transportation system, including trams, buses, and the metro. A three month student transport pass costs approximately €14 and provides unlimited access to all modes of public transportation within the city. Cycling is also popular and a convenient way to get around, with bike rentals available.

- Entertainment:

Prague offers a wealth of entertainment options for students. Cultural events, museums, and galleries often provide discounted or free entry for students. Enjoying a night out at a local pub or bar can cost around €3 to €5 for a beer. The city also hosts a variety of music festivals, concerts, and sporting events, with ticket prices varying depending on the event and venue.

It's important to note that these costs are approximate and can vary based on personal preferences and lifestyle choices. Budgeting and prioritizing expenses will help you make the most of your student experience in Prague while managing your finances effectively.

Overall, Prague offers a favorable cost of living compared to other European capitals, allowing international students to enjoy a high quality of life without breaking the bank account.
